Ross, Amanda Melissa Norton

- Amanda Melissa Norton Ross was born at Winter Quarters Iowa on the 19 April 1847.
- Her family was involved in the Haun's Mill Massacre with family members killed.
- Her family lived in a home where the George Ingram home is, just inside the Fort Wall when they came to Lehi.
- She remembered a large gate in the fort wall where the children enjoyed swinging on a swing hanging from the brace over the gate. This is one of the fort gates made by her father.
- They were afraid and used to run in the house when they would see the Johnson army coming through from Camp Floyd.
- On July 1, 1865 she married John Edgar Ross in the old Endowment House in Salt Lake City, Utah.
- Her husband, my father, was a pioneer school teacher. He taught when the tuition was paid in produce so, it took great skill to provide for their family of twelve.
- Soon after their marriage, father built a small, one room dugout, part underground and part on the ground. They lived there their first year.
- Then four rooms, two and two up were built a little farther north. This was on 3rd North and 1st West. This home when built, was the further east, away from the Fort. The fear of the Indians were experienced by Mother. The Indians later became good friends of Mother.
- She being a good seamstress and taylor, found plenty to do making coats and trousers for the people of town.

- As a nurse she was dearly loved and respected among her neighbors. It was never too cold or dark, nor was she ever too busy to help a neighbor in sickness. She went into homes where there were contagious diseases, having faith that the Lord would protect her and her own little family, though being very cautious not to take the diseases home.
- She used herbs extensively as medicine and they proved very successful. A few of the herbs I remember she used were catnip and fennel for colic, horehound for coughs and colds and for a delicacy she made horehound and honey candy. Dandelions for yellow jaundice and liver trouble. Yarrow and kinnikinnick for blood purifier - Sage brush for a spring tonic. Honey and onion syrup for cough. She burned green copperas, lump alum and sulphur on a stove lid for diphtheria, boiling peach leaves, sage, alum, honey and golden seal for canker. A cure-all salve of lard and raisin.

Then there was the foot bath, and steaming bricks or rocks to make us sweat. She made a liniment of vinegar turpentine and egg - Saffron tea for bringing out measles. Then the bags of aseffa we had to wear to guard against disease of any kind. But with faith in God the herbs gave relief for many aches and pains and saved much suffering.

- She carded, spun, and wove wool.
- When the project of raising silkworms for silk was begun she entered into that. She planted mulberry trees and produced 26 pounds of cocoons for silk. That project proved quite unsuccessful in Lehi, but her project was successful.
- In charge of activities, banquets and socials of the Ross School. Anniversary parties were held each year. They would distribute prizes to the students who succeeded. Co-Chairman was Mary Ann Webb.
- She would supervise popular banquets in Lehi. Pies, cakes and English pudding were made by Amanda. She made these for the students also. Banquets required people to bring their own chairs.
- Purchased the property which became the Ross Block of Lehi Main Street with her son William in Fall of 1900. The buildings were completed in the Christmas season of 1901. Ross and Ross went out of business after three months,
- She died 17 February 1920 and was buried in the Lehi Cemetery.
